Continuation of Substance of Interview including description of the general nature of what was agreed to if an agreement was reached, or any other comments: Applicant's representative has pointed out that the reference IA-64 does not show a storage of boolean in a special register which is located within the instruction of a executed branch path, such limitation would help optimize the code checking for subsequent runs using that same path. Examiner mentions that there is no teaching from the claim about nature of this storage, its location with respect to a particular branch analysis scenario (or stage), i.e. performed by which context of this apparently misnamed 'extensible rule-based method'. And Applicant's representative agrees to add more specifics as to how this register storage is being done in order to help the predicated branch analysis so conceived by the invention more defined, thus make it more distinct from the IA-64 reference or known prior art techniques..
